

National Intelligence Council chairman provides lessons to Indiana State students, faculty

---

November 2, 2012

Austin Arceo
ISU Communications and Marketing Staff

Indiana State University senior Simon Vega learned quite a bit about the nation's affairs in classes he needed for his legal studies and political science double major.

Yet he didn't pass up the opportunity to learn more, not from a textbook, but by directly asking questions to Christopher A. Kojm, the chairman of the National Intelligence Council. The National Intelligence Council supports the Director of National Intelligence in his role as head of the Intelligence Community and is the IC's center for long-term strategic analysis.

Vega was one of the students who listened to Kojm speak about international economics, global trends and the future during his recent visit to Indiana State. Kojm gave presentations to several groups of Indiana State students and faculty members about his work in government, including at the State Department. He also answered questions from students and faculty members on a variety of topics and situations.

...

Continue reading at Indstate.edu