

...to the Emir a year ago and told him, we did not have any anti-aircraft and the Americans did not have the aviation in the air, the aviation was on the ground at the airports. We needed rockets to bomb the airports and work on groups using mines on the roads leading to the bases and the airports.

The deputy Emir had said, we have a program like that, I do not want to hold them accountable for the past or to ask them how many times they bombed the airports, the issue is yours. Or, to ask them how many times they prepared for the upcoming season. The other matter was pertaining to the new brothers coming to Afghanistan without the ingress of the military leader or deputy Emir to learn the fields and the locations - is that good for the brothers or not? Because last summer, twenty brothers were killed in one location in Zabil; I wrote to the doctor three and a half years ago indicating that the work internally required two brothers only - one on the artillery and one of the mines. In that letter, there were thirty three brothers killed on the borders near Lawarah

We are very few in numbers and the battle inside does not require a large number. The battle thus far is in its seventh year, but the situation had somewhat improved. I believe that the most we need is five brothers in one location because the brothers inside have a price and you know several Afghanis. Every year, we waited to receive a new work approach from you and you know Afghanistan more than we do. I believe you should task those in charge of the work to purchase a small quantity of missiles and launch them on the bases where their aviation is located. Although, three years ago the missile cost was seven hundred fifty rupees but now it is three thousand

With the number you deem appropriate for this global battle and attached to this letter are pictures of the base..
