

Abandoned Fishing Boats Along Former Coast of the Aral Sea

The Aral Sea in Central Asia, once one of the world's greatest lakes, is now one of the greatest environmental disasters, measuring only a fraction of its 1950s size because of Soviet-era irrigation projects to grow cotton in the desert.